MIEULI

Franklin Mieuli

President

When the National Basketball Association Board of Governors sat down at their annual meeting last year the senior man among them was Warriors' owner Franklin Mieuli. His tenure began in 1963 when he became majority owner of the Warriors, one year after the club had moved West from Philadelphia. As chief executive of the Warriors, Mieuli has guided the club from rag-tag status in the early '60s to its present position among the top organizations in professional sports.

Beside being the dean of NBA owners, Mieuli serves as chairman of the NBA Television Committee where he brings his considerable knowledge and background in television and all pro sports to the task of negotiating national television contracts. His administrative ability and business expertise have made him one of the league's most influential owners as well as its most senior and his advice and counsel are sought in many areas of franchise operation.

Mieuli is also a part owner of the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League and for many years his company, Franklin Mieuli and Associates, has produced television and radio broadcasts for the 49ers and the San Francisco Giants of the National Baseball League.

Advertising and broadcast executive Mieuli has demonstrated his pro sports acumen many times over the years but no move was more astute than when he bypassed big name coaches to select a player off his bench, Al Attles, to lead the club in 1970. The Warriors have been winners ever since.

One of the criteria often used to evaluate a business organization is employee turnover. The fewer changes the better.

By that yardstick — as well as others — Mieuli ranks high. Consider that ticket manager, Lou Colla, and his assistant, Marie Stanfel, have been with the club since it came to the Bay Area in 1962; Office Manager Anita Wood, has been a Warrior employee for 17 years; Al Attles, player and coach, has known no other pro basketball organization; trainer Dick D'Oliva is entering his 12th season with the Warriors; broadcaster Bill King is the only radio announcer the West Coast Warriors have ever had, and his associate, Mike Marquardt, has been the club's producer of radio and TV broadcasts his entire adult life. Controller Shirley Figgens has worked for the Warriors for 11 years and production manager Lou King has been around for 14 years.

From the guy who runs the pressroom (Jack Brenner) to the stats crew chief (Bill Helbush), most of the people in the organization were around long before that first championship trophy came to rest in the team's plush new offices at the Oakland Arena.

His ascendancy to the top of the NBA mountain was a popular climb. Franklin's honesty, loyalty, and compassion for others are traits appreciated by his associates and Warrior fans.

When others questioned the viability of professional basketball in the Bay Area, Franklin Mieuli clung to his belief that the sport could thrive. His tenacity and faith have been rewarded.

SCOTTY STIRLING

Gordon "Scotty" Stirling

Assistant to the President

Daily, around noontime, Scotty Stirling pulls on his Nike running shoes and trots away from the Coliseum on another run through the streets of Oakland and Alameda. While many use running to escape the job, Stirling's thoughts on these four to eight mile midday tours nearly always focus on the Golden State Warriors and his and Coach/GM Al Attles' ceaseless efforts to return the club to its 1975 level when the Warriors were NBA champions.

However, reversing a downhill momentum that imperceptibly began building early in 1976, and had reached a dangerous speed by the time Phoenix eliminated the Warriors from the '76 playoffs, was not easy. The runaway vehicle had first to be slowed and halted before the climb back toward the top could resume.

The indefatigable Stirling's role in that continuing battle has been to establish sound financial and business practices in the front office, sign players, develop a first rate talent department and, with Attles' final approval, institute and pursue trade negotiations with the other NBA clubs.

And, though his accomplishments are largely unpublicized, they have not gone unnoticed. Last July Stirling's contract as the Warriors' chief administrator was enthusiastically renewed by Warrior owner, Franklin Mieuli.

His reputation as a negotiator and a skillful signer of top pro sports talent was recognized by his appointment to the prestigious NBA Labor Relations Committee and he is also a member of the NBA Board of Governors.

But what is likely to pay off most in the future is the sophisticated scouting and talent indexing system he instituted in his first season with the club. Top collegiate players are now recognized and evaluated as early as their freshman season.

In light of his past experience as a sports administrator in the National Football League and American Basketball Association, the confidence Franklin Mieuli places in Stirling should surprise no one.

Hired by the Oakland Raiders in 1963 as publicity director, he stayed with the NFL club until he had guided them, as the club's general manager, to their first Super Bowl appearance in 1968. During most of his tenure in pro football, Stirling was deeply involved in the bidding war for talent that was hotly waged between the rival AFL and NFL. His success in signing top stars was well known. Current Raiders, Fred Biletnikoff and Eugene Upshaw, were among those signed by the likeable native of Port Chester, N.Y.

In 1966, in his role as Raider general manager, Stirling made the trade that brought Daryl Lamonica and Glenn Bass for quarterback Tom Flores and wide receiver Art Powell. For Flores, Powell and Bass, the trade marked a virtual end to their careers, but Lamonica for several seasons was a great quarterback and led Oakland to its first super bowl appearance.

Following his resignation from the Raiders, he headed the front office of the Oakland Oaks of the ABA. The Oaks, led by a forward named Rick Barry, won the ABA title in 1968-69.

Adding his background of 13 years as a sports writer with the Oakland Tribune and his two years as sports director of radio station KNBR, it is apparent that Scotty Stirling is well qualified to head the Warrior front office.

He has either worked in the front office of, or covered as a journalist, every sports franchise in the Bay Area. It was this expertise and experience in dealing with athletes, the press, fans and other franchises, that Franklin Mieuli called upon when he hired Scotty to head his front office in June of 1976.

Alvin Attles

Head Coach/General Manager

ATTLES

Rodney Dangerfield complains he "don't get no respect". That surely never has been, or ever will be, a problem of Warrior coach and general manager, Al Attles, because it is likely that no other NBA coach is so highly admired and respected by NBA players and his fellow coaches.

For 19 seasons, both as a player and coach and always as a Warrior, Attles has earned that respect with his determination, aggressiveness, and competitive spirit. And, most impressively, through his sense of humor and ability to keep the game in perspective.

Both the aforementioned qualities were much needed last season when Attles' club missed the playoffs for the first time since the 1973-74 campaign. Nonetheless, it might have been his finest year as a coach. After a poor 15-20 start Attles tuned a sputtering Warrior engine and the club finished 28-19 over the last 47 games, winning 14 of the final 19 and going to the fourth quarter of the season's 82nd game before being eliminated from post-season play.

To say 1977-78 was Attles' finest hour is quite a mouthful because since becoming head coach with 30 games remaining in 1970, he has won a league championship in 1975, two division crowns and pro basketball's best record in 1975-76. He has also twice been named to coach the West team in the NBA All-Star game and last season achieved his 350th NBA coaching victory. Not even Eddie Gottlieb, the man who first hired Al as an unknown rookie out of North Carolina A & T in 1960, has coached the Warriors in as many games (686) or won as many times as Attles (387).

Al Attles was not a great player but a good one. He wore a Warrior uniform longer than any man, 11 years. Of the more than 1300 who have been active participants in the 27 year history of the NBA, only 25 were on the floor longer. He played the game with an unyielding competitiveness that only his nickname, "The Destroyer" could describe. In his 11 seasons as a player, Attles earned a reputation as a superb defensive performer. He played in 712 regular season games and averaged 8.9 points per game. His name is found frequently listed among the Warriors' all-time statistical leaders and he participated in seven playoffs as a Warrior. His playing highs were 33 points at New York Knicks 2/29/64 and 17 assists against Cincinnati at the Cow Palace in San Francisco 2/24/68. He was the second leading Warrior scorer the night Wilt Chamberlain poured in 100 points against New York. Al's sense of humor is never more evident than when he is asked to recall his biggest night as a pro.

"Well, Wilt and I scored 117 one night," he will say with a straight face until the laughter takes over.

Al Attles was born and raised in Newark, New Jersey, the only son of an employee of the DL & W and Erie Railway. He picked up a basketball for the first time in the fifth grade but concentrated on baseball until enrolling in Wequahic High School. He worked for a year as a stock boy in a department store before entering North Carolina A & T College in Greensboro, North Carolina.

While performing there, Attles became acquainted with Vince Miller, who had played with Wilt Chamberlain at Overbrook High in Philadelphia. Miller sustained a knee injury, however, and returned home. This turned out to be a break for Attles. Miller told Chamberlain and Eddie Gottlieb about a guy down South named Attles and that the Warriors should draft him. The Warriors eventually chose Al in the fifth round, "mostly to get Vince to shut up," says Attles.

"Getting drafted, in the fifth round especially, didn't mean much," he said. "Making the team was something else."

But make the team he did and he has known no other pro club. On January 27, 1970, he succeeded George Lee as coach of the Warriors.

Al is married to the former Wilhemina Rice, a graduate of Upsala College in East Orange, New Jersey. They live in Oakland with their two children, Alvin III, 13, and Erica, 7.

ROBERTS

D'OLIVA

Joe Roberts

Assistant Coach

One of the most telling remarks a pro scout makes about an athlete is when he writes on an evaluation form: "He's a winner."

That phrase must have been used many times to describe Warriors' Assistant Coach Joe Roberts because the likeable Ohioan has been a champion at every level of competition.

He starred on the Ohio state high school championship team at East High School in Columbus, went on to co-captain the 1960 Ohio State team, which captured the NCAA championship, and finally was an integral part of the Warriors' NBA championship season as assistant coach.

In fact, it was Roberts who coached the Warriors during the final 44 minutes of the deciding championship game with Washington. Head coach Al Attles had been ejected for storming onto the floor to protest the tactics of Bullet Mike Riordan in attempting to guard Rick Barry.

Roberts also makes a vital contribution during the regular season as he works individually with the Warriors' forwards and centers. He must be accorded considerable credit for the progress of Robert Parish.

Roberts joined the Warriors just prior to the start of the 1974-75 season with previous coaching experience at Western Michigan and the University of Iowa.

The hard-working Roberts was a three-year performer in the NBA with the Syracuse Nats, where he averaged 6.2 points per game in 181 league games.

During the off-season Roberts headed the Warriors entry into the Southern California Summer Pro League.

Dick D'Oliva

Trainer

The experience of 11 NBA seasons and an unusually high level of competence are assets that Dick D'Oliva possesses as the Warrior trainer.

D'Oliva is generally regarded as one of the outstanding trainers in professional sports and is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association and the Western Representative for the NBA Trainers Association.

He has been in the profession since 1962 and, in addition to ten NBA seasons, has also worked in baseball and hockey. D'Oliva's initial assignment was with the St. Louis Cardinals. He also served with the Baltimore Orioles, Boston Red Sox, and Washington Senators.

From there, D'Oliva moved to the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League for the 1965-66 season. He joined the Cincinnati Royals of the NBA the following campaign and in 1967-68 moved to the Warriors.

D'Oliva was a football and basketball standout at Serra High School in San Mateo and an accomplished fastpitch softball player during his playing days.

NEWELL

Peter Newell

Talent Consultant

On the court or off, few people have achieved more success or made greater contributions to the sport of basketball than Pete Newell, the Warriors' new talent consultant.

Newell's coaching accomplishments are legendary. In 21 years of college coaching he compiled an amazing .657 winning percentage, guided teams to both NCAA and NIT Championships, directed the United States basketball team to a gold medal in the 1960 Olympics, was named College Coach-of-the-Year, and won the highly coveted Metropolitan Award.

His contributions to basketball span 38 years. He has directed basketball clinics in Europe, Central and South America for the State Department, and has instituted programs for the Peace Corps. He has spent 15 years working closely with the Japanese government to develop their national basketball program.

A 1939 graduate of Loyola University, Newell began his coaching career that same year at St. John Military Academy. In the spring of 1946 he was hired as baseball and basketball coach at the University of San Francisco, where he produced an NIT Championship team in 1949. It was the first time a West Coast team had ever been invited to the tournament, let alone win it.

Newell left USF after the 1950 season and moved to Michigan State, where he coached for four years. From there, he returned to California as coach of the University of California at Berkeley.

In his six seasons at Cal (1955-1960), he took a 1-11 team (1955) to a conference championship just two years later (1957). The next three years Cal won the Pacific Coast Conference Championship. Newell's teams lost in the NCAA Western regional finals in 1957 and 1958, but went on to win the NCAA Championship in 1959 defeating West Virginia, which was led by Jerry West. In 1960 he guided Cal to a 28-1 record, and lost to Ohio State in the NCAA finals. He was selected college Coach-of-the-Year that season.

In the summer of 1960, Newell went to Rome as coach of the United States Olympic basketball team, where his team went undefeated enroute to capturing a gold medal.

That fall Newell moved to the Cal front office as Athletic Director.

Newell remained Athletic Director until 1968, when he was named General Manager of the second-year San Diego Rockets of the NBA. The Rockets had set a 15-67 record of futility in their rookie season in the National Basketball Association, but in Newell's first season the Rockets were 37-45 and made the playoffs.

When the Rockets moved to Houston in 1971-72, Newell remained with the operation in an advisory capacity until the Los Angeles Lakers named him their General Manager in 1972.

He left the Lakers after the 1976 season and was hired by the Warriors just prior to the 1977-78 NBA season.

BESTOR

Bob Bestor

Director of Marketing & Public Relations

When Scotty Stirling took over the top job in the Warrior front office his first official act was to hire Bob Bestor to assist him. Bestor was appointed Director of Marketing and Public Relations in June of 1976.

His department is responsible for all phases of the Warrior marketing effort including press relations, advertising, promotions, publications, and season ticket and group sales.

A native of Coos Bay, Oregon, Bestor brings a strong background of sports administration in both professional football and hockey to his position with the Warriors. He spent five seasons with the Oakland Raiders of the NFL and served in a variety of capacities, including Business Manager and Director of Public Relations. He was also Director of Public Relations for the Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League during the 1969-70 season.

Prior to joining the Warriors, Bestor was Vice President for Governmental Relations with Eller Outdoor Advertising, Inc., of Berkeley.

He attended Humboldt State College, where he was a member of the varsity golf team, and later received his degree from the University of Idaho. He spent six years in the Navy, some of which time included submarine duty.

A resident of Hayward, Bestor and his wife Liz have three children, Bobby, 15, Laura, 12 and Andy, 7.

Bruce Hale

Director of Community Relations

Bruce Hale has compiled an outstanding record in basketball at every level, from player to coach to administrator.

At present, he fulfills the key role of Director of Community Relations and is constantly on the move taking the Warriors' story to the fans through speaking engagements, clinics, and his unique pre-game chalk-talks.

Hale was a prep standout at Galileo High School, earning All-City honors, and was a college star at Santa Clara University. An All-American and, for three seasons the Broncos leading scorer, he was inducted into the school's Hall of Fame in 1963.

His professional career included ten seasons as a player in the NBA and three seasons of coaching with the Indianapolis Jets and the Detroit Pistons, being named to the All-World Professional Team in 1946.

From there he turned to college coaching and in 13 seasons at the University of Miami compiled a 220-112 record from 1954 to 1967.

Hale returned to the professional game in 1967 as coach of the Oakland Oaks of the ABA. The following season he took over as General Manager.

He has been with the Golden State Warriors for the past five years in his present capacity as Director of Community Relations.

Scott MacTavish

Promotions Director

Promotions, half-time entertainment, ticket sales, and Warrior publications are some of Scott MacTavish's responsibilities in the Warriors' organization. Hired shortly after his graduation from the University of California at Berkeley where he majored in economics, MacTavish is entering his fourth season with the Warriors. One of Scott's main objectives is increasing fan awareness of the Warriors through printed advertising and merchandising promotions.

Scott still runs approximately ten miles every day a holdover from his varsity track days at Cal where he was a middle distance specialist.

Born in Oakland 25 years ago, he has lived in California all his life. He lists his outside interests as "running, camping, music, and searching for obscure and unique half-time entertainment."

He and his wife Judee, now reside in Walnut Creek.

Warriors' Broadcaster

Bill King, Warriors' broadcaster since the team's move to the West Coast, will once again describe the play-by-play action of Warrior basketball on both radio and television.

King will broadcast all 82 Warrior regular season games on radio and will do an audio simulcast on the 20 game Warrior television package.

The talented and versatile Warrior play-by-play announcer has long been recognized as one of the NBA's most expert and entertaining sportscasters.

He has a varied background in sports and his list of credits includes Bradley University football and basketball, University of Nebraska football and basketball, University of California football and basketball, San Francisco Giant baseball, and Oakland Raider football. King still serves as the Raider radio play-by-play announcer, along with his duties as Warrior sportscaster.

KNBR radio (680 kc.) San Francisco will again be the Warrior radio outlet for the 78-79 season, while the 20 game television package will be seen on KTVU (channel 2) Oakland.

Tom Abernethy

Born and raised in South Bend, Indiana, hard by Notre Dame's Golden Dome, and educated at the University of Indiana, Tom Abernethy is, by any definition, a midwestener; from a part of our country whose people are described as stable, dependable, solid, and reliable. Such adjectives indeed might be ascribed to Tom Abernethy's personality but also they are most certainly words which accurately reflect the sort of basketball player he is.

In 1976 he came to the NBA and the Los Angeles Lakers after playing on Indiana's undefeated (32-0) NCAA Championship team and having gained a reputation for seldom making a mistake, sound defense, and a good shooting eye. All solid, mid-American virtues — particularly in basketball-mad Hoosier country.

Now, after two seasons as a Laker, where he twice led that club in fewest turnovers per minute played, Tom will blend his skills and special abilities into Al Attles' 11-man team concept.

The route from Los Angeles to Golden State proved to be a bit more circuitous than the usual 55-minute plane ride. Tom chose not to re-sign with the Lakers and his negotiating rights were traded to Buffalo only hours before he became a free agent. While the Braves were in the process of becoming the Clippers of San Diego, Warriors' exec Scotty Stirling contacted Tom, found he was interested in becoming a Warrior, and made short work of his signing.

Though he's been in the league for just two seasons, Abernethy has played in fast company for more years than that. At Indiana, under Bobby Knight, he teamed with eventual pros Scott May (Chicago), Kent Benson and Quinn Buckner (Milwaukee), and Bobby Wilkerson (Denver).

He and his wife Susie recently purchased a home in the Walnut Creek area.

E. C. Coleman

The initials don't stand for anything, the man's name is simply E.C. But around the NBA the full name, E. C. Coleman, stands for defense. So much so that the league's coaches voted him to the NBA's All-Defensive first team following the 1976-77 season.

Signed by the Warriors as a veteran free agent on October 3, 1977, he began his career with the Houston Rockets and after playing in Texas for one season, was obtained by the New Orleans Jazz in the expansion draft of May 20, 1974.

Last season was one Coleman would probably rather forget. A series of personal tragedies and injuries limited his minutes and effectiveness. The fact that he was named to the All-Defensive second team by the league's coaches despite an avalanche of troubles is a tribute to his character. The perceptive person who said "sports don't build character, they reveal it" was right on if he had E.C. in mind.

Though not a prolific scorer, he has the ability to consistently hit the open jump shot and last season had his highest percentage from the field (47.5%) since his rookie season. But his great strength is as a defensive player. He is one of a handful of NBA forwards with enough quickness to defense small scoring forwards as well as the size and strength to take on the larger, power forwards.

E.C., his wife Katherine and their two children, live in Metaire, Louisiana, in the off-season and during basketball time rent former Warrior Gus Williams' house in Oakland.

Wesley Cox

Wesley Cox's maiden voyage in the NBA wasn't exactly a pleasure cruise. But, after a struggling start he proved he belonged in the league with his sparkling late season performances.

The second of a pair of Golden State first round draft choices in 1977, Cox came to the Warriors with the reputation of being one of the strongest college players in the nation. Considering his skills and All-American status, the University of Louisville grad was expected to take up the slack at the forward position created by Jamaal Wilkes' departure.

The optimism faded quickly when he reported to the Warriors training camp overweight and out of condition. Then the 6-6 forward pulled a hamstring muscle in camp and was limited to a total playing time of 18 minutes in three pre-season appearances.

When the regular season got underway Cox played briefly in 17 of the Warriors first 22 games but on December 6, was placed on the injured list with asthma problems. At that point he had averaged 6.2 minutes, 1.5 rebounds and 1.4 points per game.

Once deactivated, Wesley headed home to Louisville to recuperate and ponder his future in the NBA. Written off by many Bay Area critics, Cox still held the respect of the person who counted the most — Alvin Attles.

As Kansas City Kings forward Richard Washington later commented, "I had seen Wesley in college and knew he would be a good pro player as soon as he got his health back. Only a coach that knows basketball would realize how good he could be."

After a 33 game sabbatical, Cox rejoined the team in February. Golden State's record was 27-28, and the club was in the midst of a three game losing streak. It was more than coincidence that the Warriors late season success paralleled the resurgence of Wesley Cox. As the battle for playoff berths came down to the wire, he averaged 21 minutes, 7.6 rebounds and 11.6 points while hitting 49.2% from the floor in the last crucial eight games. Though the Warrior season ended one quarter short of the playoffs, there was a feeling of optimism about a young forward who, pound for pound, had demonstrated he is among the strongest players in the NBA.

At University of Louisville, he was named to several All-America teams and to the All-Metro Conference first team. In his final college season he averaged 16.5 points and 8.0 rebounds in 28 games. Prior to that he attended Male High School in Louisville where he led his team to an 83-17 record over three seasons plus the Kentucky State Championship in 1971.

During the off-season on July 15, Wesley married his high school sweetheart, Janice Campbell.

Charles Dudley

Surely the greatest compliment ever paid Charles Dudley's basketball ability was when long-time Warriors' broadcaster Bill King said, "my overall impression of Charles Dudley is that he is Al Attles revisited." King's analysis of Charles Dudley is, as usual, astute. Dudley plays the game with Attles' sort of all-out intensity, particularly on defense, and he shares with Attles the same limitations; for instance, he is not a great outside shooter. Certainly he represents what Attles seeks as far as team defense. He plays extremely tough, yet seldom does he get his team in foul trouble. He is perpetual motion on defense, gives everything he has in every game and will take whatever physical punishment he must to get the job done. Before making the club in '74-'75 he was twice rejected by the Warriors and was released by Seattle in '72-'73 after playing just 12 games.

After being out of basketball for a season he battled his way back via a Warriors rookie camp prior to the '74-'75 season. He came of age in an early November game against the New York Knicks when he came in to take charge of the Warriors offense and play Walt Frazier to a standstill on defense.

Despite his outside shooting limitations, Dudley, like Attles, is a high percentage shooter from the field. In fact, Dudley's career shooting percentage is over .500. Chalk it up to quick hands — he gets a shot off as quickly as anyone in the league — and good judgment, he seldom takes a bad shot.

"Hopper" is another Warrior whose value can't be measured statistically. For example, there is no way statistics can reflect the defensive job he put on Kevin Porter in the first game of the 1975 NBA championship series with Washington when his shutdown of the explosive Porter keyed the Warriors' come-back from a 14-point halftime deficit.

On the other hand, from a statistical standpoint, Dudley unquestionably had one of his finer pro seasons in '77-'78. He was second on the club (to Barry) in assists though he didn't start. For the third consecutive season he did not foul out of any game and, in fact, has been disqualified on personal fouls only once in his five NBA seasons.

Rickey Green

The first Warrior rookie starter since Rick Barry, Rickey Green lived up to his college press clippings as one of the fastest men with the ball to ever play the game. A starter for the first 28 games, Green often used his tremendous quickness to shut down the opposing teams' small penetrating guards.

The 15th player chosen in the 1977 NBA draft and Golden State's top pick, Ricky Green came to professional basketball with a winning reputation. In high school his team, Chicago Hirsch, won the Illinois state prep title in 1973. A two-time JC All-American at Vincennes, where he led the club to a 60-10 record, Green tallied 1,295 points at the Indiana school to finish three points ahead of Bob McAdoo's career mark. After transferring to Michigan, he was All Big Ten and the leading scorer as a junior on a team which went to the finals on the NCAA tournament. He closed out his collegiate career by being named to most All America teams, including AP, UPI and The Sporting News, and was runnerup in the AP and UPI balloting for Collegiate Player of the Year. His total of 1,184 points at Michigan is a school record for a two-year career. The 6-1 170 lb. native of Chicago is noted for his great quickness and speed.

John Lucas

Though the inscription on his necklace is "Cool Hand", an appendage that has dealt 1,231 assists in just two NBA seasons might better be described as hot. But then, whoever heard of "Hot Hand Luke"?

Regardless of the temperature of his talented left hand, John Lucas has quickly established himself among the NBA's finest ball-handling and play-making guards since being drafted out of Maryland by Houston in 1976 as the "first of the firsts." It was a selection which raised a few eyebrows. In his first pro season Lucas started the final 54 regular season games, quarterbacked the Rockets to the Eastern Conference finals, finished 10th in the league in assists, averaged 11.0 points per game, and just missed being NBA rookie-of-the-year. The eyebrows were back in place.

He started all 82 games last season, finished second in the league in assists and came to the Warriors as the principal element in the compensation package awarded the Warriors by NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien for Rick Barry.

He joined his new teammates in September of 1978 immediately following his quarterfinal round loss in the mixed doubles competition of the United States Open Tennis Tournament. When basketballs aren't bouncing in the NBA, Lucas is a member of the New Orleans Nets of World Team Tennis and his doubles partner, as at the Open, is Renee Richards. Last season the pair were the WTT's winningest mixed doubles combo.

Lucas' entry to the Golden State backcourt alongside 6-4½ Phil Smith is a distinct change of pace from his two seasons with the Rockets where he played chiefly with 5-9 Calvin Murphy. Now, for the first time in his career, he will not often be required to defense the league's bigger, more physical guards.

A bachelor, he comes from Durham, North Carolina, where his father is a school principal. He was All-American in both tennis and basketball at Maryland and is the school's all-time top scorer.

Robert Parish

Game 46 on the Warriors' 1977-78 schedule was significant for two reasons: first, blowing a 22 point second half lead in Detroit represented the nadir of the Warriors season, and, second, Robert Parish became the club's starting center on that chilly January night. There is no correlation between the two because Parish played well that night, logging 42 minutes, grabbing 19 rebounds, scoring 15 points and contributing three steals and three shot blocks.

The game marked a personal turnaround for Parish in a season which, to that point, had not been going well. After contracting a stomach virus in Mexico during the off-season, he reported to training camp underweight and physically weak. Though he worked daily with assistant coach, Joe Roberts, and improved in several areas he still had difficulties getting into the flow of games coming off the bench. The problem was recognized by Al Attles who decided Robert might be more effective as a starter. Though his statistics didn't change appreciably after the switch, Parish became more aggressive and made major contributions during a late season drive to the playoffs which fell just short. He averaged slightly under 16 points over the final eight games and, for the season as a whole, led the team in blocked shots.

This season Parish came to camp bigger, stronger, even more aggressive and determined to continue the improvement that began last winter in Detroit.

He played college basketball at Centenary where he was first team choice on the Sporting News All-American team in 1976 and, in 1975, led the United Sates team to a gold medal in the Pan American Games in Mexico City.

Many thought Parish would be the first player selected in the 1976 college draft but he was surprisingly available when the Warriors chose in the 8th spot. He gave a strong 10 game playoff performance as a rookie, averaging 24 minutes and more than 10 rebounds and 12 points against a pair of formidable opponents, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Bob Lanier.

The native of Shreveport, La., lives in Hayward during the season.

Sonny Parker

Robert "Sonny" Parker could become the NBA's best "sixth" man since a young John Havlicek wore out high top basketball shoes by the gross. Only, that is, if he's not a starter for the Warriors at forward or guard.

But whether a starter or versatile reserve, the mercurial "Sonny P" is one of the most potent weapons in Al Attles' arsenal.

Drafted in 1976 as the final pick of the first round of the NBA draft, he came to Golden State by way of the playgrounds of Chicago, Mineral Area JC and Texas A & M. His hustling defense, flying slam dunks and tireless pace not only made him a crowd favorite, but also earned him a starting berth in the final weeks of last season. Attles discovered the 6-7 swingman could not only spark the Warriors off the bench, but could team effectively with Phil Smith in the Warrior backcourt.

With Parker at guard for the last 16 games, the Warriors' record was 11-5. During the final eight games of last season he averaged 5.0 rebounds, 14.3 points, and shot 58.4% from the field in 34.8 minutes. Overall, he improved over his rookie season in four statistical categories: minutes, rebounds, assists and scoring.

Quick hands and an uncanny ability to crash the offensive boards are also in Sonny's repertoire as evidence by the fact he was second on the club in steals and fifth in rebounding.

Appearing in all 82 games last season, Parker logged 33.8 minutes, 14.0 points, 5.5 rebounds in 22 games as a starter and averaged 22.1 minutes, 10.4 points and 4.5 rebounds per game off the bench. Though not a starter for most of the season, he was fourth on the team in minutes played.

Parker was an All-State performer at Chicago's Farragut High School and a two-time JC All-American at Mineral Area. A talented baseball player as well, he turned aside a scholarship feeler from Arizona State to concentrate on basketball at Texas A & M. According to baseball scouts he had "great speed and got a good jump on the ball." That report would also be valid in the NBA.

Clifford Ray

What Clifford Ray probably does best on a basketball court is win. In seven NBA seasons the clubs for whom he has played have a combined 358-216 record, a winning percentage of 62.4%.

In seven NBA seasons he's been in the playoffs six times and, in 1974-75, anchored the Warriors' championship team. A winner has a winning attitude and Ray's was never more apparent than when he willingly stepped aside when Al Attles concluded Robert Parish might contribute more as a starter than off the bench. That willingness to sacrifice personal gain for the good of the team demonstrates just one reason why he is considered the club's spiritual leader and called by some "the soul of the team."

Ray is good at other things, too, like rebounding. For the fourth straight season he led the Warriors in that department.

Something he doesn't do is take bad shots. In 1976-77 he established a new Warrior field goal percentage record (58.4%) and is the club's all-time leader in that category at 52.9%. His field goal percentage of 53.8% for his 60 career playoff games is the second best in NBA history. He has almost 100% accuracy on his spectacular slam-dunk which, besides tallying two sure points, can intimidate an opponent and arouse a home crowd.

But simple arithmetic can never measure Clifford Ray's value to the Warriors. The intangible qualities which he possesses perhaps count for more than the physical attributes. For instance, Ray played most of the 1976-77 season with a painful foot injury. Though the foot slowed him noticeably and limited his performance, he played with his usual fervor through the regular season and playoffs.

Ray came to the Warriors prior to the '74-'75 season in exchange for popular Nate Thurmond in one of the most controversial trades in club history. He quickly became a crowd favorite with his intense and enthisiastic approach to the game.

Phil Smith

Not many players accomplished in their first four NBA seasons what Phil Smith has:

* Played a key role as a rookie on an NBA championship team.
* Made two All-Star game appearances.
* Selected in 1975-76 to the All-NBA second team and, that same season, to the second All-Defensive team.
* Averaged just under 20 points per game over the last three seasons.
* Started 246 consecutive NBA regular season games, the longest current unbroken string of starts in the league.
* Twice scored 50 or more points in a single game, one of five players in the history of the franchise to have done so.

Though it's quite a list for just four NBA campaigns, the first of which he averaged just 14 minutes per game, in the final months of last season Phil gave Warrior fans reason to think the best is yet to come.

In the season's last 19 games, played under the pressure of an intense scramble for the final Western Conference playoff spot, Smith averaged 22 points and shot better than 52% from the field in more than 39 minutes per game.

Scoring exploits were but one facet of his game during that tense stretch run. He became a more complete player, passing sharply to teammates for 6.5 assists per game and taking charge in the closing moments of games with strong drives to the hoop or posting low for key jumpers.

Despite his emergence as a powerful individual scoring threat, he has the ability to play within the framework of Al Attles team concept. Indicative of that is his 1083 assists over the past three seasons.

Having starred at the University of San Francisco, as well as the city's George Washington High, Smith lends a local flavor to the Warriors. Last year he and his wife purchased a home in Walnut Creek but both still spent a lot of time in San Francisco where he operates three sporting goods stores.

Last December, Phil became a father for the first time as his wife Angie gave birth to a girl, Alicia.

Nate Williams

Near the end of 1977 it became apparent that the slumping (15-20) Warriors were in need of more firepower from their bench. Enter Nate Williams, a hometown product hailed in far away New Orleans as "instant offense". While the Warrior brain trust shies from such difficult-to-live-up-to titles, the description fit. With Nate often coming cold from the bench to bury his long range bombs, the Warriors played the last 47 games of the season 28-19. He was one of several important contributors to a Warrior turnaround that left them just seven points short of the NBA playoffs.

The former McClymonds High (Oakland) star came to the Warriors for a second round draft pick and averaged 11.2 points in just 18 minutes per game. At New Orleans he had averaged 7.8 points in 27 games early in the '77-'78 season and was second only to teammate Pete Maravich in steals and scoring for the entire '76-'77 campaign.

In addition to his great outside shooting ability, he can, at a muscular 6-5, play both guard and forward, a valuable asset in this day of the 11-man roster.

Williams was drafted by Cincinnati (now Kansas City) in the first round of the 1971 junior season at Utah State. He was subsequently traded to New Orleans for Rick Adelman and Ollie Johnson in early 1975.

Short

The Golden State Warriors used the fifth pick in the draft to select 6-7 forward, Purvis Short of Jackson State. A small college All-American for the past two seasons, Short averaged 29.5 points and 11.4 rebounds per game his senior year at Jackson State and was named the Southwest Athletic Conference's Player of the Year. In the Aloha Classic, a post-season all-star tournament composed of 32 of the top college seniors, he was named to the tournament All-Star team after averaging 25.3 points, 10 rebounds, and shooting 60% from the field in the three game tourney. In four seasons at Jackson State, Short averaged 23.4 points and 9.3 rebounds.

Townsend

On the final pick of the first round Golden State chose UCLA's only senior player in 1977-78, guard Raymond Townsend. The two-sport letterman began his basketball career under the tutelage of John Wooden and in his freshman year, was part of the Bruins' National Championship team. As UCLA's most consistent outside threat, he averaged 14.7 ppg last season, hitting 178 of 332 shots from the field for 53.6% — the second best percentage ever by a UCLA guard. The 6-3 sharpshooter also tied the Bruin free throw percentage mark of 87.2% set by Jamaal Wilkes in 1973-74. In addition to his basketball talents, Townsend lettered three years in baseball, finishing with a .319 career batting average. He was drafted by the Cincinnati Reds in the sixth round of the 1977 baseball draft.

Wayne Cooper

Epps

The ambition of Ray Epps' young life has been to play in the NBA, one seldom fulfilled by a fifth round draft choice. But when the quiet Virginian elected to forego his final year at Norfolk State in order to embark on a professional basketball career, he apparently knew exactly what he was doing. His hustle and speed immediately caught the eye of Warrior coach Al Attles in the June 1977 rookie camp and Epps was invited to return in September to the regular camp where he demonstrated a good measure of natural talent to complement the hustle. However, a chronic back slowed his development and he spent the entire 1977-78 season on the club's injured list.

He began playing basketball on the playgrounds of Richmond, Virginia and was a prep star at Richmond's George Wythe High School where he played center.

At Norfolk State he played three seasons of varsity competition before making himself available for the NBA draft. In one game as a freshmen he was a perfect 12 for 12 from the field. Epps was an all-conference selection in his sophomore and junior seasons and during his final year at Norfolk he was the conference's MVP and led his club in both scoring (23.3) and rebounding (11.2). On December 13, 1976, he went 20 for 29 from the field, scored 43 points and grabbed 13 rebounds in a 104-93 win over Rutgers.

Cooper

Acquired in the second round of the 1978 NBA college draft, Cooper led the University of New Orleans to the Sun Belt Conference Championship and was Player of the Year in that conference last season. The 6-10 swingman was New Orleans' leading rebounder in his sophomore through senior years and was twice selected his team's Most Valuable Player. During his frosh season he teamed with Wilbur Holland, currently with the Chicago Bulls. In addition, his college mentor was former NBA Coach Butch van Breda Kolff. Cooper impressed Warrior coaches in rookie camp with his attitude and ability. An excellent shooter and rebounder, he finished in the top five in rebounding in the Los Angeles Summer Pro League.

Warrior History

1962-63

Warriors' first season in San Francisco after 16 years in Philadelphia . . . Got off to a great start by manhandling Detroit, 140-116, with Wilt Chamberlain ripping through 56 points at the Cow Palace . . . Team's performance dipped to 31-49 for season (fourth in five-team Western Division) but The Big Dipper never let up . . . Wilt led the NBA in scoring for the fourth year in a row, slamming in 44.8 points a game while hitting 50 points or more 30 times . . . Chamberlain's high for the season was 73 against New York on Nov. 16, 1962 . . . He hauled down 41 rebounds against Detroit on Oct. 26, 1962 en-route to capturing the rebound title with a 24.3 average . . . Guy Rodgers handed out 28 assists against St. Louis March 14, 1963 to tie Bob Cousey's NBA record . . . Guy edged Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson for the assists title, averaging 10.6 a game to 9.5 for the Big O . . . Tom Meschery, St. Mary's All-American, poured through 1,022 points for a 16.0 average . . . Postseason Honors: Wilt second team all-NBA behind Boston's Bill Russell . . . Draft: Warriors make one of best selections in history of the franchise by choosing Bowling Green center Nate Thurmond on the first round . . . Coach — Bob Feerick.

1963-64

WESTERN DIVISION CHAMPIONS . . . Franklin Mieuli's first year as owner of Warriors . . . Alex Hannum replaced Bob Feerick and was voted Coach of the Year for leading Warriors to division championship with a 48-32 record, two games better than runnerup St. Louis . . . Warriors allowed opponents only 102.6 points per game, low mark in the NBA . . . Wilt Chamberlain took league scoring honors for the fifth year in a row, averaging 36.9 to 31.4 for Oscar Robertson . . . Wilt rammed through 18 straight field goals against New York on Nov. 27, 1963 . . . The big guy pulled down 38 rebounds against Boston on April 24, 1964 but relinquished his rebounding title to Bill Russell . . . Rookie Nate Thurmond supported Wilt on the boards, snaring more than 10 rebounds a game . . . Playoffs: With Wilt averaging 34.7 points, Warriors overcame St. Louis (4-3) in the Western Division final before bowing to Boston (4-1) in the championship series . . . Postseason Honors: Writers voted Chamberlain NBA's MVP but players gave nod to Robertson . . . Thurmond was selected on the all-rookie team . . . Draft: Chose NYU's Barry Kramer.

1964-65

Warriors plummeted to last in the NBA with 17-63 record and .213 winning percentage . . . With club floundering, Wilt Chamberlain was traded to Philadelphia for Connie Dierking, Paul Neumann and Lee Shaffer . . . Shaffer never reported to Warriors . . . Club was 13-27 for months of January and February . . . Nate Thurmond, who showed what he could do by yanking down 37 rebounds against Baltimore in Oakland on Oct. 27, 1964, developed rapidly as a scorer (16.5, tops on Warriors), rebounder (18.5 average, third best in league) and a dominating defensive presence . . . Rookies Barry Kramer (the No. 1 pick) and Bud Koper (No. 2, Oklahoma City) both disappointed . . . Draft: Last was a good place to finish in 1965, the year of the bonus rule in the NBA draft . . . Warriors received two of first four picks and chose Miami of Florida's Rick Barry and Davidson's Fred Hetzel . . . Coach — Alex Hannum.

1965-66

Warriors climbed from 17-63 to 35-45 (fourth in West) with rookie Barry scoring 2,059 points for a 25.7 average, fourth in NBA behind Wilt Chamberlain (33.5), Jerry West (31.4) and Oscar Robertson (31.3) . . . Rick tossed in 40 or more points seven times . . . His best night came in New York on Dec. 14, 1965 when he buried 18 of 29 from the floor and 21 of 22 free throws for 57 points. . . Barry also ranked 10th in league in rebounding with 850 retrieves for 10.6 average and second in free-throw percentage (.862 to .881 for Boston's Larry Siegfried) . . . Nate Thurmond pulled in 1,312 rebounds (18.0 per game), including 42 against Detroit at the Cow Palace on Nov. 9, 1965 . . . Guy Rodgers continued to dish out assists (846, 10.7 average) but he went to the hoop more himself, scoring 47 points at Los Angeles on Nov. 19, 1965 and 46 in New York against the Knicks on Nov. 23 . . . Postseason Honors: Barry named Rookie of the Year, polling 84 of 86 votes cast (Philly's Billy Cunningham received the other two) . . . Rick also beat out Boston's John Havlicek and Baltimore's Gus Johnson for a first-string forward berth with Cincinnati's Jerry Lucas on the all-NBA team . . . Draft: A good year with Vanderbilt's Clyde Lee No. 1 and USF's Joe Ellis No. 2 . . . Coach — Alex Hannum.

1966-67

WESTERN DIVISION CHAMPIONS — Warriors complete turnaround by easily winning division title with 44-37 record under new coach Bill Sharman . . . St. Louis finished five games back and Los Angeles eight . . . Rick Barry captured NBA scoring crown with 2,775 points (35.6 average) . . . Rick was incredible in month of February, hitting 40 or more points seven times, including 50 against Boston in Oakland Feb. 14, 1967 . . . He also was named the MVP in All-Star Game after leading West to 135-120 victory by pouring in 38 points . . . Nate Thurmond ranked fourth in league in rebounding with 1,382 retrieves (21.3 average) . . . Nate hauled down 37 against Los Angeles at Cow Palace Dec. 20, 1966 . . . Trade of Guy Rodgers to Chicago Bulls for Jeff Mullins and Jim King Sept, 7, 1966 helped Warriors . . . Playoffs: Warriors defeated Los Angeles (3-0) and St. Louis (4-2) before losing to Philadelphia (4-2) for NBA championship . . . Philly series was very close . . . Key to series was game one when Warriors lost in overtime, 141-135, after leading by two with just a few seconds remaining . . . Barry averaged 34.7 in playoffs . . . Mullins (17.7) and King (16.3) played well . . . Thurmond averaged 23 rebounds in playoffs . . . Postseason Honors: Barry first team all-NBA and fifth in MVP vote . . . Thurmond second in MVP race to Philadelphia's Wilt Chamberlain . . . Draft: Took big David Lattin (6-7, 230) out of Texas Western.

1967-68

Rick Barry left Warriors, and potential dynasty for four-year hiatus in American Basketball Association . . . Record slipped only slightly (43-39) but Warriors dropped from first to third in standings behind St. Louis (52-26) and Los Angeles (52-30) . . . Team started well (28-14) but injury to Nate Thurmond hurt . . . Nate played only 51 games and still finished fifth in league in total rebounds (1,121, 22.0 average) . . . Second-year man Clyde Lee took over at center and hauled down 1,141 rebounds, fourth best in NBA . . . Lee pulled in 30 against New York February 20, 1968 . . . Rudy LaRusso, acquired in three-way deal with Detroit and Los Angeles, was No. 1 Warrior scorer with 1,726 points (21.8 average) . . . Jeff Mullins (18.9) and Fred Hetzel (19.0) took up some of scoring slack left by Barry's departure . . . Playoffs: Warriors gunned down first-place St. Louis (4-2) in one of most exciting series in team's history . . . Injured Thurmond didn't play . . . Ex-Hawk Mullins averaged 25.1 in playoffs . . . Los Angeles swept Warriors (4-0) in Western Division final . . . The last year as Warrior coach for Bill Sharman who went to ABA . . . Draft: No. 1 choice Ron "Fritz" Williams of West Virginia.

1968-69

George Lee, Bill Sharman's replacement, guided Warriors to 41-41 record, third in West behind Los Angeles (55-27) and Atlanta (48-34) . . . Jeff Mullins (22.8 points per game), Nate Thurmond (21.5) and Rudy LaRusso (20.7) provided most of firepower . . . Mullins bombed Detroit for 42 points on Jan. 29, 1969, in the Motor City . . . Thurmond had 41 points against both Seattle and Chicago . . . Nate grabbed 1,402 rebounds in just 71 games for a 19.3 average, second best in NBA . . . He yanked down 34 against Wilt Chamberlain and Los Angeles on Feb. 2, 1969 . . . Playoffs: Warriors startled talent-rich Lakers by winning first two games in Los Angeles behind Mullins' spectacular shooting . . . But Lakers came back to take four straight . . . Postseason Honors: Thurmond selected first-team center on all-Defensive team . . . Draft: Picked Creighton's Bob Portman on first round.

1969-70

A significant season . . . Al Attles named coach of Warriors with 30 games remaining . . . Warriors limped in with 30-52 record for sixth place in Western Division . . . Nate Thurmond was injured again and played only 43 games . . . Jeff Mullins finished 12th in NBA scoring with 22.1 average . . . Jerry Lucas, acquired from Cincinnati at start of season rebounded well (14.3 per game) and scored consistently (15.4 average) . . . Luke gathered in 28 rebounds against Los Angeles on March 10, 1970 and 26 against Atlanta in Oakland on Feb. 10 . . . Clyde Lee filled in for Thurmond and pulled down more than 11 rebounds a game . . . Joe Ellis enjoyed his best season as a Warrior with 1,202 points (15.8 average) . . . Draft: Did not have first round pick after trading choice for negotiating rights to Zelmo Beaty.

1970-71

Al Attles, in his first full season as Warrior coach, pulled club back up to .500 with 41-41 record, seven games back of Los Angeles in the newly aligned Pacific Division . . . A healthy Nate Thurmond played all 82 games and led team in scoring with 1,641 points (20.0 average) . . . Nate slammed through 43 at Detroit on Feb. 24, 1971 . . . Jeff Mullins totaled fewer points (1,562) but had a higher average (20.8) . . . Warriors were strong on the boards with Jerry Lucas (1,265 rebounds, 15.8 average) and Thurmond (1,128, 13.8) . . . Luke ripped 28 off the boards against Portland at the Cow Palace on Oct. 24, 1970 . . . Playoffs: Milwaukee, with Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) and Oscar Robertson, blitzed Warriors (4-1) . . . Bucks went on to win NBA championship . . . Postseason Honors: Thurmond picked as center on all-Defensive team over Alcindor . . . Draft: No. 1 pick Darnell Hillman of San Jose State signed with ABA . . . Guard Charles Johnson of California taken in sixth round.

1971-72

Warriors moved permanently across the Bay to Oakland and changed name to Golden State . . . Team won 10 more games than in 1970-71 and improved record to 51-31 but still languished 18 games back of Los Angeles Lakers who captured 33 straight en-route to compiling best record ever in NBA (69-13) . . . Golden State went 13-1 in January . . . Trade of Jerry Lucas for Cazzie Russell helped Warriors . . . Cazzie pumped in 1,693 points (21.4 average), second on team to Jeff Mullins (1,720, 21.5) . . . On Nov. 2, 1971 in Oakland, Cazzie buried 20 of 33 field goal attempts and sank three free throws for 43 points against Baltimore . . . Mullins doubled as scorer and playmaker . . . Jeff hit 18 of 22 from the field in scoring 43 against Chicago on Jan. 24, 1972 and dished out 18 assists at Portland on March 17, 1972 . . . Nate Thurmond was great as usual both in scoring (21.4 average in 78 games) and rebounding (16.1 per game, fourth best in league) . . . With Lucas gone, Clyde Lee took over at strong forward and hauled down 1,132 rebounds (14.6 average) . . . Playoffs: Milwaukee and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar knocked the Warriors out of the semifinals (4-1) . . . Postseason Honors: Thurmond on second team all-Defensive unit . . . Chamberlain first-team center by one vote . . . Draft: No. 1 choice Cyril Baptiste of Creighton never played for Warriors because of personal problems . . . Washington's Charles Dudley picked in fifth round . . . Coach – Al Attles.

1972-73

Rick Barry returned . . . But even with Barry back, Warrior record dropped from 51-31 to 47-35, still good for second in Pacific Division behind Los Angeles (60-22). . . Rick topped Warriors in scoring (1,832 points, 22.3 average) and fired in 51 points against Houston on Jan. 17, 1973. . . Barry also led NBA in free-throw percentage (.902). . . Golden State started by winning 15 of first 22, lost 15 of last 29. . . Cazzie Russell dropped in point production (1,693 to 1,254). . . Clyde Lee, playing less, saw his rebound total fall from 1,132 to 598. . . Nate Thurmond kept control of the boards, grabbing 1,349 rebounds for a 17.1 average, second best in league to Wilt Chamberlain (18.6). . . Playoffs: Clyde Lee had his finest NBA hours against heavily favored Milwaukee, dominating the boards in Golden State's 4-2 series triumph. . . Clyde received long standing ovations from Arena fans in some of most dramatic moments in Warrior history. . . Cinderella story ended in Western Conference final as Lakers romped (4-1). . . Post-season Honors: Barry second team all-NBA at forward. . . Thurmond second team all-Defensive selection. . . Draft: No. 1 choice Kevin Joyce of South Carolina opted for ABA. . . No. 2 pick Derrek Dickey from Cincinnati. . . Coach — Al Attles.

1973-74

Warriors (44-38) again finished second to Los Angeles (47-35) in Pacific Division . . . With Nate Thurmond missing 20 games with injuries, Rick Barry took up the slack, scoring 2,009 points for a 25.1 average . . . Rick was second in NBA in free-throw percentage (.899 to Ernie DiGregorio's .902), eighth in assists (6.1 per game) and fifth in steals (2.11) . . . Barry poured in 30 field goals and four free throws in 64-point effort against Portland at the Arena, March 26, 1974 . . . Only Wilt Chamberlain and Elgin Baylor ever had scored more points in a regular season game . . . Rick also handed out 17 assists against Buffalo on Nov. 10, 1973 . . . Cazzie Russell returned to form with 1,684 points and a 20.5 average . . . Cazzie buried 49 points against Houston, Dec. 11, 1973 . . . . . Playoffs: Warriors were out of playoffs because three teams from the Midwest Division (Milwaukee, Chicago and Detroit) finished with higher winning percentages . . . Postseason Honors: Barry first-team forward on all-NBA team . . . Draft: Warriors hit the jackpot choosing UCLA's Keith Wilkes on the first round and USF's Phil Smith on the second . . . Coach — Al Attles.

1974-75

WORLD CHAMPIONS — The year began disastrously . . . Warriors lost free agent Cazzie Russell to Los Angeles and had to relinquish Clyde Lee to Atlanta as part of the 1970 Zelmo Beaty deal . . . There were also cries of disbelief when Golden State dealt Thurmond to Chicago for unheralded Clifford Ray . . . But coach Al Attles somehow convinced 12 players that the whole was greater than the sum of the parts as the Warriors won the Pacific Division with a 48-34 record . . . That was just a down payment on the big one, the world championship . . . Rick Barry enjoyed his finest all-around season as a pro . . . Rick poured through 2,450 points for a 30.6 average, second to Buffalo's Bob McAdoo . . . Barry also led the league in free-throw accuracy (.904) and steals (2.85 a game) and was sixth in assists (6.2) . . . He scored 40 or more points six times, including a 55-point effort against Philadelphia Jan. 23, 1975 . . . But no one or two players made the difference . . . Al Attles' "family concept" wore down the opposition as Golden State turned into a running super-quick, aggressive club with two centers (Clifford Ray and George Johnson) going all out for 48 minutes . . . Playoffs: WESTERN CONFERENCE SEMI-FINALS — Warriors overpowered Seattle (4-2) with George Johnson grabbing 15 rebounds and blocking eight shots in the decisive sixth game . . . WESTERN CONFERENCE FINAL — Warriors outlasted Chicago (4-3), coming back from an 11-point halftime deficit to take Game seven in Oakland, 83-79 . . . Johnson blocked four shots in the closing moments to nail down the victory . . . Barry saved Golden State in Game six at Chicago by scoring 36 points and picking up seven steals . . . CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES — Heavily favored Bullets were supposed to control the boards with Elvin Hayes and Wes Unseld and blitz the Warriors in four straight. . . In one of the great upsets in the history of sports, the Warriors dominated the boards (215-171) and swept the Bullets (4-0) behind Rick Barry's prolific scoring (29.5 average) and outstanding play from Phil Smith (10.8) and Derrek Dickey, who shot an incredible .739 from the field. . . Postseason Honors: Barry made all-NBA first team at forward but was only fourth in MVP voting behind Bob McAdoo, Dave Cowens and Elvin Hayes. . . Wilkes was named Rookie of the Year over Atlanta's John Drew. . . Draft: Golden State was unable to sign No. 1 pick Joe Bryant of LaSalle but struck gold with No. 2 choice Gus Williams of USC and No. 3, Bubbles Hawkins out of Illinois State.

1975-76

PACIFIC DIVISION CHAMPIONS — Warriors raced to best record in the NBA (59-23), leaving their competition in the division far behind . . . Golden State was 36-5 at home and 23-18 on the road . . . Barry was 10th in NBA scoring (1,700 points, 21.0 average), fourth in steals (2.49 per game), fifth in assists (6.1) and first in free-throw percentage with a phenomenal .923 mark, not far off Bill Sharman's 1959 record of .932 . . . But this always will be known as the year guard Phil Smith became an NBA-star . . . On the night of Jan. 8, 1976 the 6-4½ Smith hit 20 of 22 field goal attempts and 11 free throws for 51 points against Phoenix in Oakland . . . Jerry West, then a TV announcer, said a few days later that Smith had more physical tools than any guard in the league . . . Using his great reach and jumping ability, Phil average 23.6 points over the final 47 games of the season . . . Playoffs: Smith and Barry averaged 24 points apiece as Warriors struggled past Detroit (4-2), winning sixth game in overtime, in the Western Conference semifinals before being upset by Phoenix (4-3) in Western Conference final . . . Postseason Honors: Barry first team all-NBA at forward and Smith second team at guard . . . Jamaal Wilkes and Smith second team on all-Defensive team . . . Draft: Warriors used Laker choice from Cazzie Russell signing to select Centenary center Robert Parish, the eighth player chosen . . . Many thought Parish would be the first pick in the entire draft. . . . Coach — Al Attles

1976-77

Year of the merger with the American Basketball Association . . . Warrior record fell from 59-23 to 46-36 for third behind Pacific Division champion Los Angeles (53-28) and runnerup Portland (48-34) . . . Rick Barry (21.8), Phil Smith (19.0) and Jamaal Wilkes (17.7) carried the scoring load . . . Injuries to Derrek Dickey, Dwight Davis and nagging pains of Clifford Ray hurt Warriors on the boards . . . Barry set NBA free throw mark of 60 straight and passed 20,000 points total for his pro career . . . Rookies making the Warriors: center Robert Parish, forward, Sonny Parker, and guard Marshall Rogers . . . Playoffs: Warriors took three-game slugfest from Detroit (2-1) in Western Conference quarterfinals before losing in seven to Lakers and towering presence of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in semifinals . . . Draft: Grabbed Rickey Green, Michigan's super-quick guard, on first round along with Louisville forward Wesley Cox . . . Coach — Al Attles.

1977-78

Prior to season free agents Gus Williams and Jamaal Wilkes signed with Seattle and Los Angeles. . . Golden State entered free agent market by signing former New Orleans forward E.C. Coleman. . . Warriors finished at 43-39, fifth in Pacific Division, eighth straight season at .500 or better. . . Golden State often won at home (30-11) but ran into difficulties on the road (13-28). . . Rick Barry (23.1) and Phil Smith (19.7) again led in scoring. . . Barry set personal high with .924 FT mark. . . Mid-season acquisition Nate Williams showed why he is called "instant offense", averaging a point every 1.58 minutes, tops on the team. . . To make room for Williams, Warriors waived veteran guard Charles Johnson in January. . . Second year pro, 6-6 Sonny Parker, made successful transition to guard late in season. . . Warriors won 14 of last 19 games, with Sonny in backcourt for final 16 outings. . . Playoff: Late run at playoffs fell one game short as Warriors lost to Seattle 111-105 in season finale. . . Only second time in last eight seasons team did not qualify for playoffs. . . Postseason honors: E.C. Coleman won second team honors on all-Defensive team. . . Draft: For third consecutive year, Golden State had two first round choices. . . Used L.A. choice from Wilkes compensation to grab 6-7 forward, Purvis Short, of Jackson State (fifth overall), then selected UCLA guard, Raymond Townsend, on final pick of first round (twenty-second overall). . . Second round pick was 6-10 forward$center, Wayne Cooper, from University of New Orleans.

It Happened Then

When the Warriors made their debut in the NBA, then known as the Basketball Association of America, they defeated Pittsburgh, 81-75, November 7, 1946, at Philadelphia Arena in a game in which five of the Ironmen fouled out.

Pittsburgh had only four players remaining and Warrior coach Eddie Gottlieb offered to let a fifth Ironman participate, giving Pittsburgh a full complement. But the rival coach, Paul Birch, was so incensed at the officiating he refused. Gottlieb then pulled one of his athletes and the game finished with four against four.

Finger-Tip Facts

Owners: Franklin Mieuli became majority owner of the Warriors in 1963 and is now the senior owner in the NBA in years of service.

Head Coaches: Al Attles is the tenth coach the Warriors have employed and also the winningest, with a record of 387-299, a .564 mark

Players: Through the 1977-78 season, 164 players have put on a Warriors' uniform and played in at least one regularly scheduled NBA game.

Seasons: The 1978-79 season marks the Warriors 17th season in the Bay Area. From 1946-47 to 1961-62 the Warriors were based in Philadelphia where they won NBA Championships defeating Chicago in 1947 and Fort Wayne in 1956.

In 1962-63 the team moved west to San Francisco where the Warriors captured one Western Conference title in 1967.

In 1971 the Warriors broadened their fan base by adopting the "Golden State" or at least the northern half, as their "home." Since 1972-73 the Warriors have played all their regular season games at the Oakland Coliseum Arena and accomplished their greatest success in 1974-75 when they swept the Washington Bullets for the NBA Championship.

Games: Through 1977-78 the Warriors have played 2,406 regular season games with a won-loss record of 1,226-1,180. The Warriors home record since moving west is 370-235. For past six seasons their home record at the Oakland Coliseum Arena is 176-70, a mark of .715.

Arenas: The Warriors have played in several arenas since moving west in 1962 including the Cow Palace, San Francisco Civic Auditorium, Oakland Auditorium, San Jose Civic Center, and the Oakland Coliseum Arena.

Attendance: In the last four seasons the Warriors average home attendance has been 11, 010

COMMISSIONER LAWRENCE F. O'BRIEN

Lawrence F. O'Brien moved from the rough-and-tumble world of national politics to an equally competitive world in professional basketball.

O'Brien assumed his duties as National Basketball Association Commissioner on June 1, 1975, after he was elected unanimously by the NBA Board of Governor's.

It was a time of conflict and stress for the league and the sport. The NBA was engaged in costly competition with the American Basketball Association. There were inter-league rivalries between NBA teams competing for the same players. There were deep divisions between players and owners, and the courts were studying the reserve clause and other aspects of the league's contracts with players.

It was obvious the NBA needed to fill the Commissioner's position with a conciliator and mediator, as well as an administrator. O'Brien met those stringent criteria.

O'Brien had been a key advisor to two Presidents, a member of the Cabinet and twice was National Chairman of the Democratic Party. He had directed the Presidential campaigns of John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson, Robert F. Kennedy, Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern.

As special Assistant to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson he coordinated with Congress the legislative programs of the "New Frontier" and the "Great Society", winning the respect of Congressional leaders of both parties. As Postmaster General, he developed the concept of restructuring the Post Office Department into the non-profit U.S. Postal Service.

"The O'Brien Manual" – plans and procedures for organizing political campaigns – was adopted by both U.S. political parties and many in foreign countries as well. His abilities as a "peacemaker" were underscored dramatically by the manner in which he conducted the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

The importance with which O'Brien was held by political ally and opponent was emphasized again by the Watergate burglary in 1972. It was O'Brien's office in which the intruders were captured. His phone had been bugged and his files had been rifled.

In less than 18 months after O'Brien became Commissioner, the major problems plaguing the NBA had been overcome. O'Brien settled the dispute between the New York Knicks and the Philadelphia 76ers over the rights to George McGinnis, brought the Oscar Robertson suit to a conclusion that satisfied the courts and helped bring about a new collective bargaining agreement between the Players Association and the league.

Most important, an expansion agreement was reached with the ABA, bringing four new teams into the NBA, and the league approached the 1976-77 season with the most lucrative TV contract in its history.

O'Brien was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, attended grammar and high schools in Springfield, and was graduated from Northeastern University in 1942 where he received a Juris Doctor degree. He holds honorary doctorate degrees in Law, Public Administration, Humanities, Public Affairs, and Humane Letters from Western New England College, Villanova University, Loyola University, Xavier University, Northeastern University, St. Anslem's College, American International College, Wheeling College, and Seton Hall University.

O'Brien's autobiography "No Final Victories" was published by Doubleday in 1974 and reprinted in paperback form in 1975 by Ballantine.

O'Brien is married to the former Elva Brassard of Springfield, Mass. They have a son, Lawrence F. O'Brien III, an attorney in New York.
